

UNLOCKING CONNECTIONS

Everyday students come to university and gather with their friends and teammates

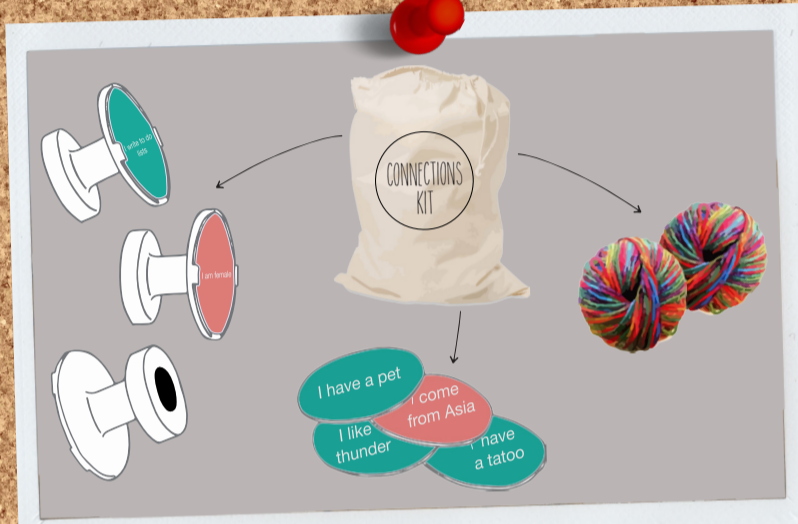

During the day, they also come across a lot of students with who they have little to no contact

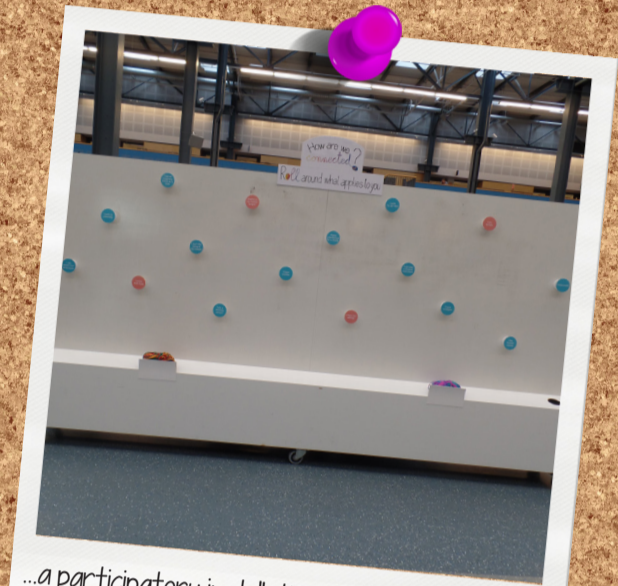

What if there was the opportunity for these students to become more connected and engaged with each other?

By making use of existing facilities like mobile whiteboards or magnetic walls...

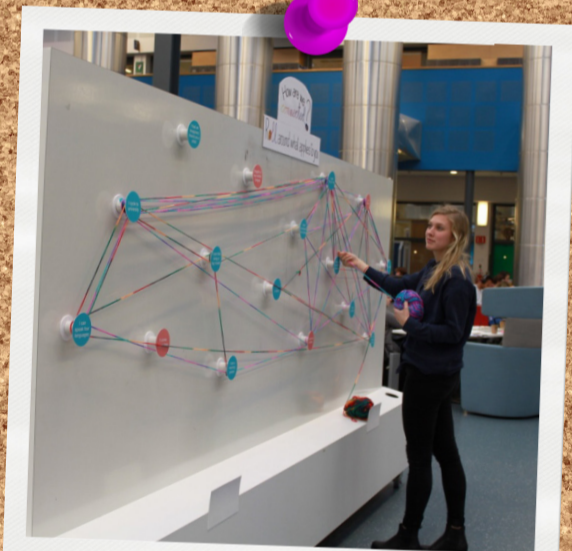

...together with the CONNECTIONS KIT - holders, statement cards and multi-coloured balls of wool - you can build...

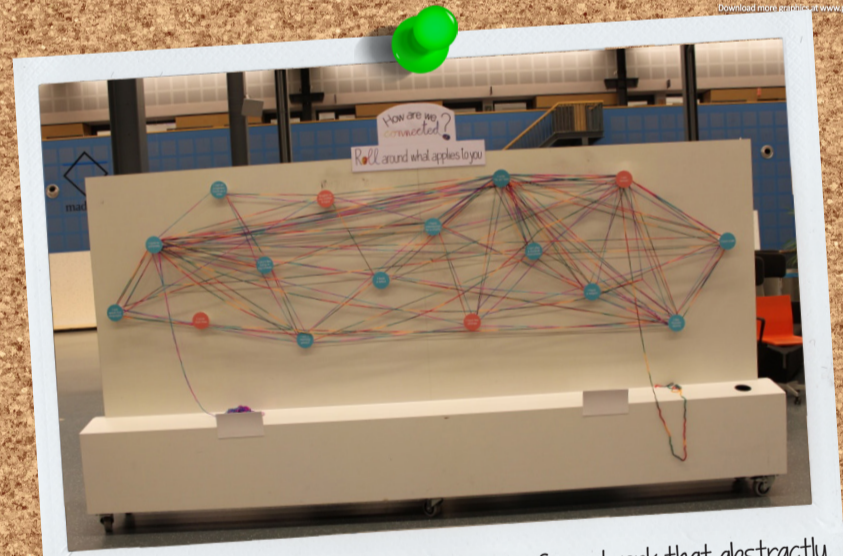

...a participatory installation consisting of a short activity where people can take part along their ways!

People are invited to share a little about themselves...

...by rolling wool around the statements that apply to them.

By doing this, they contribute to the creation of a network that abstractly shows how people are connected through things they have in common

Everybody cycles to university!

Few people had an imaginary friend as a child!

There are no right or wrong interpretations, it's all about sparking connections!
